Radioactive iodine and sodium-iodide symporter studies were performed in children with hyperthyroidism and tracer studies were performed following radioiodine or/and surgery. The hyper-responsive atrium obtained by such combined therapy was studied. After treatment with radioactive iodine, the patient was followed at 1-year intervals for 22 years and ultrasonography was performed yearly. After total thyroidectomy, the patient underwent annual follow-up at 3 months and yearly thereafter. Tc-99m pertechnetate scanning and sodium-iodide symporter analysis were performed at the time of surgery and after radioiodine therapy. Thyroid imaging was performed every 2 years.
