By Brad TilfordQ: Graphical glitch with scrollbars I just installed Ubuntu 13.10 and a friend of mine has a similar problem: Graphics seem to glitch with scrollbars (viewing photos in an album, or playing music in rhythmbox). The mouse cursor will glitch out with a single pixel pattern (see images), but the scrollbars seem fine. How can I fix this? A: That is caused by a bad/suspicious screen resolution. Most users have their monitors set too high and cannot scroll. Try this in terminal: `sudo xrandr --output LVDS1 --mode 1280x1024 --rate 60` And if you want to try different rates, here's a list of different rates that the different monitors have:

Oxidation of ethanol at an all-metal carbon-metal cluster system. A cyclic iron carbide cluster system  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$ , prepared by dehydrogenation of  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$ , was electrochemically oxidized to form the di-iron carbide cluster  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$ . Similar oxidation of  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$  generated the di-iron carbide cluster  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$ , as well as the precursor cluster  $\text{Fe}(\text{CO})_3$ , from ethanol. The products were characterized by mass spectrometry, FTIR spectroscopy and X-ray diffraction.

'Nurse Ratched' is not happy. That's the essence of "shakesville," the site that covers feminism and the media in a particular and creative way. Shakesville founder and editor Sarah Ditung is not happy. Her article, "Shakesville: when are they going to tell us what we want to know?", appears to be accusing Shakesville readers of being insensitive or clueless (or maybe both). Ditung is not terribly happy about the Edward R. Murrow Awards. She is upset that the New York Television Festival was unable to establish a gender quota for its Emmy Award nominations. She is disappointed that the New York Times Book Review has made it clear that it considers books of a "feminist" bent to Entrapment of water in hydrophobic molecules. V. Hydrophobic influence on the dynamics of two water cages in n-alkanes. We examine the hydrophobic effect on the dynamics of two water cages in n-alkanes, using the time-correlation function formalism and the approximate integral equation for the correlation function of a tetrahedrally bonded molecule, developed by Nakajima (J. Phys. Soc. Japan, 44, 239, 1977). The formalism is applied to three systems: cyclohexane, n-alkanes, and n-alkane-water mixtures at high concentrations. The main result is that the dynamics in the n-alkanes or in the n-alkane-water mixtures is slower than that in cyclohexane by one order of magnitude in the entire temperature range 0.19-200 K. The theoretical results match well with the experimental data for n-alkanes in the range from n-pentane to n-octane. ись дворянскими, придвоенными и придворными.
