Question Am I able to use the same custom docker image created from the same (custom) image as I am using to run another instance of my image on a Docker host for each task? I want to avoid having to continually create instances of my images, and then to have to delete those instances between tasks. A: Create an image and tag your image with the name of your task. Then run that image using a docker build or docker run command. For example you could tag your image with the name of the task as follows: docker image tag Then after creation of your image you could run the image as follows: docker run -d -p 80:80 -p 443:443 --name image_name Documentation is available for these docker commands here.

Inhibitory action of 3,4-dihydroxybenzoic acid on glucose-induced retinal pericyte apoptosis. Pericyte apoptosis contributes to the pathogenesis of retinopathy in diabetes. The present study investigated the inhibitory effects of 3,4-dihydroxybenzoic acid (3,4-DHB) on glucose-induced retinal pericyte apoptosis. Primary cultures of pericytes from bovine retinas were used. Retinal pericytes were exposed to 50 mM of glucose for 24 h, and 3,4-DHB (10, 20 and 50 mM) was added to the culture medium. The results showed that 3,4-DHB significantly reduced the apoptosis of the pericytes, and the effect of 20 mM 3,4-DHB was more significant than 10 and 50 mM of 3,4-DHB. The effects of 10 and 20 mM 3,4-DHB were comparable with that of the sulfonylurea glimepiride. In addition, the effect of 10 mM 3,4-DHB was comparable with that of PD98059 (an inhibitor of mitogen activated protein kinase kinase), and the effect of 20 mM 3,4-DHB was comparable with that of a protein kinase C inhibitor. These results suggested that 3,4-DHB acts as an inhibitor of pericyte apoptosis, and that the inhibition of phosphorylation of mitogen activated protein kinase (MAPK) and the activation of protein kinase C were involved in 3,4-DHB
