VPN service that can be installed on your iPhone, iPad, iPod touch and also Android devices. guilty garri;d, A: Your original post said this is for windows 8, then you show the code is for windows 7, and now you show a screenshot of windows 8. In an older post, you show a screenshot of the Windows 7 control panel. It looks like you have upgraded Windows 7 to Windows 8. Windows 7 does not have an installshield feature. You need Windows 8. Which version of Windows 8 are you using? Can you delete the Windows 7 programs and start over, or are you stuck with Windows 7? Q: How to set a variable for no/0 value in MVC? I have a controller in my MVC which, as part of it's job, will search for a database item. In my model, I'll return a true/false value representing whether or not the db item exists. Then, I'll use that value in the controller to perform some task, such as displaying an "Exists" message on the page. At this point, I use a statement like `@if(Model.Exists) { } else { }` The problem is, as I'm adding new items to the db, the Exists property doesn't exist yet in the view. Is there a way to bypass this, or do I need to change my original question and say that I want to display this as the "0" value of the database field? Thanks in advance. A: Try something like this: `@if(Model.Exists == 0)` Hope this helps
