Hi, I need help with the My WinLocker 14 ID, because when I try to crack it, it responds that the software is not compatible with the ID. Any suggestions?Q: How to set the value of from a JQUERY Generated I have an element in which it generates a autocomplete menu via JQuery. I need to be able to set the value of the first radio-button to a specific entry on the list, in this case when the "Choose a Country" is selected. I've tried using document.getElementById('my_text').value But this still sets the value to "choose a country" Do I need to be setting this value using JQuery, and I've tried $('#my_text').val("one"); But this just adds a new item to the input element and doesn't set the radio button value. Any suggestions? Thanks. A: You could create a simple function like this: function SetRadioValue(radioInput, value) { radioInput.value = value; } Then call this function in the onClick handler of the radio button: It's not a perfect solution, but it's a valid approach. Otherwise, using Javascript should be enough. UPDATE: As long as you use an on the first , you can use the HTML5 property value instead of the value attribute on the element: one two three four Meet Dominique, the cute boy who loved wrestling and had a knack

The planned name change was announced by the city of Berlin on October 27, and it will go into effect in January 2015. The name was inspired by Charlemagne, and it was chosen from four finalists. Among the four finalists were Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial and the Trades Union Congress, which were also suggested by the council. The station will be renamed from Westbahnhöfe to Charlemagne-Platz, as it is the Charlemagne monument in front of the station that will be replaced. The monument was erected after the death of Otto von Bismarck in 1890. The Westbahnhöfe station opened in 1968 and consists of a three-storey building at the end of a long, long platform. The actual platform is 15 meters long. The station is part of the underground line M19 (S-Bahn) and is located in the district of Spandau in the south-eastern district of Berlin.Q: How to use a class as the target of a label? I'm attempting to create a class that implements a Range(), so that I can pass the class into an iterable. I then want to create a label that will allow me to create a GUI with a slider to show a list of elements from the iterable. def action(self): self.iterable.append(self.myClass(x)) label = tk.Label(self) self.label.configure(text = self.iterable) self.label.grid(row = 0, column = 1) This is the code I'm using right now. But the error I'm getting tells me "NameError: global name'self'
