Polling firms are set to make changes to how they collect and analyse information under changes to electoral laws for federal and state elections made by the Liberal and National parties. The new laws — which have been approved by a Senate committee — will require all parties to retain digital voting documents for three years and will give the Australian Electoral Commission access to the poll information. However, pollsters said the changes may require changes to how they conduct their current work. A Senate committee has unanimously recommended that the changes be made under the law. Under the changes, the Liberal and National parties have requested that they retain no more than five years of digital voting information, rather than three, although the AEC has the ability to extend the data retention period. The Liberal party said the change was aimed at preventing security breaches. "The events in the last month have left us with no choice but to legislate for this," the party's policy director Simon Birmingham said. "This was one of the responses the Government needed to take action on. "The Government was motivated by the very real prospect that someone, somewhere might be able to access or derive information about electors from the documents that are held in the

Based on the original manga, the film adaptation centers around the rivalry between Mutsuki, played by Kōki Yamaji, and his handsome classmate Riku Hiragi, who is the first person to help Mutsuki realize his dream of becoming the best teacher at the shinigami school he attends. Takahiro Miura wrote the script based on Yoshihiro Togashi's YuYu Hakusho manga which is published by Shueisha. Masashi Tanaka (One-Punch Man, Psycho-Pass) will direct the film and Masahiro Motoki (My Hero Academia, Attack on Titan) will be its character designer. Miura is also adapting the entire Yuruyuri manga by Yuruyuri creator Natsume Akatsuki. The film will open in theaters on October 18, 2016 and will be distributed by Toho. The film will be distributed theatrically by Polygon Pictures in North America with distribution by Section 23 Films in the United States and Canada, and by Toho Company Ltd

What's new:

Slay The Bigies is a puzzle video game developed by independent developer StealThisGame for the Nintendo DS. It was released in June 2007 in Europe. The game uses the DS touchscreen to manipulate various objects, move characters, and complete stages. The game features the narration of a wizard (voiced by Tim Curry) addressing the player and other characters who visit his realm. Development began at first as a mobile phone game and the original design was to include micro transactions. A month after the release of Slay The Bigies, the developers' focus shifted from the mobile version and the micro transactions were dropped. The game was released in North America in August 2007 for $4.99. Gameplay Slay The Bigies is divided into nine levels. The main objective is to destroy the architecture on the stage by accumulating gold and arrows. The gold required to destroy the building is available in lodes on the stage which are gathered by the player. The gold can also be acquired by destroying enemies. The game is continued from a previous level to give the player an opportunity to level up. In addition to collecting gold, the player can slay giants in the level. Slaying the bigies rewards the player with more gold and arrows and is essential for unlocking secrets and bonuses. Each level consists of five large buildings, each with a different number of rooms. The large buildings can be broken down by smashing its pillars, and all rooms in the building can be opened which then reveals arrows to shoot to the target. Like in pinball, rooms can be aligned to reach a target. A player can only have one target reached at a time. The player can also control characters known as Little Wizards. Some of these characters have specific special skills that can be used on the screen. Five such characters are available. The player can only have one character on the screen at a time. At the end of each level, the player receives a progress bar and a gold bar showing the number of gold he/she has collected. The gold is accumulated for destroying enemies. The game also has a score multiplier and that must be exceeded to proceed to the next level. Outside the main courses the player can find unlockable blacksmith stages which can be used to unlock potions, knights, and vikings, which are special characters when used, increase the multiplier, and change the order where arrows are fired. When players complete ten blacksmith stages they can unlock Secret Shop which contains many un-lootable giving us the opportunity to spend another adventure on the test server. To all the testers: Thank you very much! Server Update Starting March 8th, the Leviathan expansion will be available on the server. Players will get to use the new Passive Powers, Torpedo Launchers and the new equipment. Features & Content Gameplay Changes and Additions Major Changes: New Experience System: The Legacy system is gone. Players that are leveling up will be able to unlock new Passive Powers after hitting milestones. These new Passive Powers can be activated using new currencies: Powerstones (earned by killing Titans), Bounty Coins (earned by defeating other players) and Experience Points (earned by leveling up). New Missions: Players can now participate in 3 new missions, the Trident Bounties, a 3-player Bounty Hunt and the Bounty Capture mission. New Weapon: The Torpedo Launcher will be added to Leviathan. Players will get a Torpedo Launcher backpack when they acquire the new equipment. This weapon is effective only at a very short range, but it is more powerful than its predecessor. It also has a larger and more accurate spread of fires. New Passive Powers: Players will be able to wield the new Passive Powers after achieving certain milestones on the server. These powers are much stronger than the existing Passive Powers, providing powerful bonuses to different aspects of the gameplay. Torpedo Launcher: Players will start with the Torpedo Launcher backpack and the new equipment. They will be able to use the Torpedo Launcher through level 8. It can be upgraded to the new type of Torpedo Launcher (the Vortex Launcher) which will be the most powerful gun in the game. Powerstones: Players will be able to start the game with a Powerstone instead of a bag. If the player chooses to get a Powerstone, the player must either defeat four or five other players or defeat a Titan and complete the mission. Players will be
