After a nuclear war took place, everything has turned in grey. It is the year 2066, and there are no more people left on earth. You wake up in this new wasteland, just looking for answers but that's not what you're going to get. You're going to find yourself in a strange world, with the people you can trust for support, and enemies who will try to kidnap you and do with you whatever they want. Every day, you will have to make sure you're safe, and make sure you find what you're looking for. You will also have to decide on which path to take, or which allies you will have. And to make your life even harder, you have to keep in mind that the world is not a simple place. The people and the rules have changed, but your decisions will affect everyone around you. Game Features: • More than 60 hours of gameplay in 2 to 4 players •Explore the entire map •Find your own way through the vast world •Watch the environment grow around you •Find your first shelter at the beginning •Minimize the dark and increase your chances to find items •Use character upgrades •Meet the people of the world, as their roles are important to your progress •Keep all the good things to remember and embrace your full potential •Discover how to use weapon combinations and use different vehicles •Enjoy the numerous playable characters •Puzzles and hidden items •The story is not dependent on the choices you make, and can even continue if you quit •No artificial endings •The game will keep you enthralled at any time •Multiplayer and online co-op modes •Easy to learn and

A World of Vaporia City is set up with different districts in each zone. When you start the game you will have three lives and you can store one of the three in your Storage-Box. The Storage-Box will allow you to utilize your stati. You can jump to the Storage-Box with the B-Button, you can use the A-Button to activate the stati item and you can reload a weapon with the T-Button. When you do one of these actions, your chances of dying are increased. It doesn't cost you any stati points, but you have only three lives. There are four normal weapons, which can be unlocked by finishing certain optional mission. Each weapon can be chosen once per character. The other four weapons of each character can be unlocked in the Armory. The health meter will fill up whenever you use an action. When it is full, you will start out with only one life. The special ability of each character can be equipped once per character. The abilities can be found in the Armory. You can equip some abilities in your backpack and activate them with the P-Button. Every special ability will have a different effect. The hidden grenades (Throw grenade to ur enemy) can be found in the Armory. The vehicles can be found in the Armory. They can be unlocked for any character with a special Vehicle-Level. The special abilities can be found in the Armory. They can be equipped once per character. The class-system in Goggles allows all three characters to use the same weapon. The difference between the characters is only in their special abilities. It is very useful to think about the three characters as three different classes. The sound effects in Goggles are not based on the Playstation-Audio. Therefore you can adjust them with any of the many sound-editor programs. When adjusting the sound effects it should be kept in mind that a character using the special ability "Fire Breath" on the Snipe-Weapon is always the first to "hear" the enemies through the sound-attributes. The character with "Fire Breath" automatically notifies the other characters that something is coming their way with the special ability "Fire Breath". In the case of a fight the character with "Fire Breath" needs to protect the other characters and should only use his special ability "Fire Breath" when the enemies are completely inside the circle of fire. The first 50 challenges will be set in a

War Thunder - USA Pacific Campaign It was not the United States of America that started the Pacific War. To be precise, it was Japan who declared war on the US in December 1941. However, the string of events that are known as the Pacific War saw the US and Japan's aggressive interventions in various regional and global affairs as well as in the Pacific theatre. In those two years of conflict, the Japanese carved an independent empire in the Pacific, which at its peak stretched from the Philippines through the Dutch East Indies, Sumatra and even to the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. This article deals with events in the Pacific between 1941 and 1945. The article first attempts to outline the strategy of the Japanese military and then goes on to analyse how it fared in terms of military might, technology, strategy and tactics throughout the whole war and what happened in the Pacific region. Strategy of the Japanese military Military strategy as defined by the Federal Service for State Secret Protection (FSSP) falls into one of two categories: focused and dispersed. A focused strategy is characterised by a clear objective and a single, narrow strategy to achieve it, which can be a thrust, a sally or a raid, or combined by a mix. Examples of focused strategies include operations like Pearl Harbor or the Fall of France. A dispersed strategy involves multiple actions which draw upon all available resources to achieve one or more broader strategic objectives, such as the Japanese operations in Burma and North Africa. The contrast between the two can be seen between China's and Japan's strategies. The drawn-out strategy of the Chinese was explicitly formulated by Chiang Kai-shek after Pearl Harbor. The events led to the defeat of the Japanese Navy and air forces at the battle of Guadalcanal, which led to their abandoning the strategically important island of Guadalcanal in 1943. Introduction Japan may not have made an initial boast, either publicly or privately, to pick up to an estimated thirty million to forty million Russian soldiers as spoils of war by defeating the Russian Army in World War II. In contrast, the Chinese government undertook to fight a guerilla campaign that entailed a mammoth, multifaceted struggle that lasted for almost three decades. Generally, the Japan considered it impossible to win the war. But, it will settle for half a loaf rather than none. Japan wished to retain its "Eastern Monopoly" as a buffer against the western powers. Japanese strategists correctly judged that the war would be an unequal competition
